AWA Builds New Project Methodology with PMP

AWA is launching a new Project delivery methodology – “STAR – The right Systems, the right Team, the right Attitude giving the right Results.”

Built in conjunction with PM-Partners Group it will form the cornerstone of AWA’s delivery of project services to its customers.

“An increasing part of our business is deployment and project services. This is everything from the installation of a handful of PC’s to multiple server upgrades at very remote sites around the country. We have always used standard project management tools to do this, but realised that we needed something tailored to our business” said Mark Rainbird, AWA’s Managing Director.

Pete Swan joint founding Director of PM-Partners group: “We have worked with AWA for over 7 years on various projects. We are delighted to be part of the development and launch of AWA’s tailored project methodology. The method combines years of AWA’s field experience with global best practice in project management to provide a highly efficient, effective and flexible service to AWA’s customers. We are confident this will enhance their already highly respected service capability.”

Mark went on to note that: “We have found PMP to be an excellent partner. We already had most of the parts of the jigsaw, but they have helped us put it together in a very practical, easy to understand way that will substantially improve our capabilities in the deployment and project delivery markets.”
